ABSTRACT

Section I of this two-part guide lists 48 university affiliated facilities (UAFs) for persons with developmental disabilities. Staff names and phone numbers for administrative personnel, primary activity coordinators, projects, programs, and disciplines are provided. Section I also lists mental retardation research centers by state. A resource index offers a cross-reference that allows the user to locate resources by subject category (e.g., assistive devices, chronic illness, family support, prenatal diagnosis). Section II lists addresses and administrative staff names and phone numbers for selected government agencies and programs. Among these are the following: Administration on Developmental Disabilities (including Developmental Disabilities Councils by state, and state protection and advocacy agencies); National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, Mental Retardation and Developmental Disabilities Branch; Department of Health and Human Services, Division of Maternal and Child Health (including regional consultants, state programs, and special projects); Department of Education, Office of Special Education and Rehabilitative Services (including state directors of special education); and the Consortium for Citizens with Developmental Disabilities. Contact information is provided for the national Shared Communication and Assistance Network (SCAN), a systematic information and referral system for state and local information resources, referral services, and national databases. The National Center for Education in Maternal and Child Health (NCEMCH) is a major link between sources of information/services and the professional in areas of maternal and child health, including genetics. While the primary focus of the information is for the health care professional, the National Center also serves the lay public by providing specific information in response to requests.

The National Center provides assistance in the development and evaluation of new materials and educational programs; maintains a resource center of educational materials; offers conference planning and support; maintains a master calendar of meetings and conferences; edits materials for publications; and publishes a variety of guides, directories, bibliographies and newsletters.

For further information or assistance, contact the National Center through the UAF/DD electronic mail network or by writing or calling as shown above.

Special Olympics is an international program of physical fitness, sports training and athletic competition for mentally retarded children and adults. It is unique in that it accommodates competitors at all ability levels by assigning them to "competition divisions" based on both age and actual performance. Even athletes in the lowest divisions may advance all the way to the International Games. More than one million mentally retarded individuals now take part.

Special Olympics contributes to the physical, social and psychological development of mentally retarded participants. Through successful experiences in sports, they gain confidence and build a positive self-image associated with success rather than failure. Success on the playing field often carries over into the classroom, the home and the job.

THE SHARED COMMUNICATION AND ASSISTANCE NETWORK

The national SCAN network offers a systematic information and referral system for a wide spectrum of service providers. SCAN has been developed by the American Association of University Affiliated Programs for Persons with Developmental Disabilities (AAUAP), in cooperation with the Surgeon General's Office, the Office of Human Development Services (ADD), the Office of Special Education and Rehabilitative Services (NIHR), and the Bureau of Health Care Delivery and Assistance (Division of DMCH).

SCAN is a joint undertaking between the public and private sectors. Using established commercial networks, SCAN provides one common communications medium for state and local information resources, referral services, and national databases. AAUAP, acts as the marketing and contract agent for SCAN. By joining SCAN, you can utilize all of these services at local, state, regional, and national levels.

Electronic Mail Correspond personally with organizations and individuals in the SCAN network through your own electronic mailbox. Messages sent to you are stored until you retrieve them. The message also can be printed out in hard copy for filing or interoffice dissemination. You can send reports, memos, letters, forms, client information, or fiscal reports within seconds -- at a cost much lower than telephone or public mail.

Bulletin Boards To receive up-to-the-minute information on special areas of interest, communicate with professionals, exchange advice and information, you can check SCAN's Bulletin Boards. Agencies can post data they wish to share with others in a community or across a state. Professional associations may use the Bulletin Boards for legislative updates or alerts; agencies can alert grantees of changes in regulations, announce RFPs, or provide monthly updates of activities of their department.

Databases National, state, and local resources provide electronic versions of resource guides, client record systems, interagency aggregate information, research reference libraries, and much more. Most of these databases are searchable by keyword descriptors or menu selection.

File Transfer Records of clients can be transferred easily and quickly between agencies having cooperative agreements. This makes possible timely delivery of transmittal documents.

Information and Referral SCAN provides a referral network for clients who traditionally have not been able to seek out a wide variety of different resources. With information about wide geographic areas available online, SCAN will make available information and referral data about services in surrounding communities that might not otherwise be readily known.

For additional information on SCAN, contact: SCAN, 8605 Cameron Street; # 406, Silver Spring, MD 20910 (301) 588-8252; E-Mail: SCAN.
